4. Mental Health Initiatives at the OCDSB—Petra Duschner

- Clinical Psychologist and Manager of Mental Health and Critical Services at OCDSB
- The team is part of Learning Support Services and is made up of Social Workers, Psychologists, and Child and Youth Workers.
- Fourteen to twenty percent of children and youth will experience mental health challenges significant enough to affect learning. Only a quarter of those will receive evidence-based intervention. This situation is getting worse.
- Academics and well being are interwoven
- In 2012, the Ontario government released a 10-year mental health strategy.
- The first three years were focused on children and youth. It funded
 - school based mental health workers;
 - mental health and addiction nurses (every school has access to one); and
 - a revised health and physical education curriculum (that includes social skills, feelings, managing stress, and mental illness)
- Supporting Minds: An Educator's Guide to Promoting Students' Mental Health and Well-being (Ministry of Education), <http://www.edu.gov.on.ca/eng/document/reports/SupportingMinds.pdf> - Excellent resource.
- There is a mental health leader in every school district, who is responsible for
 - developing a mental health strategy for the district,
 - implementing and measuring the impact of the strategy, and
 - working with community partners.

- The language that is used to talk about mental health is important:
 - There is a difference between mental health and mental illness.
 - The use of incorrect language—e.g., using the word “anxiety” when we mean “worry”, “depressed” when we mean “sad”, “violence” when we mean aggressive (there is a specific definition for violence)—stigmatizes, diminishes real mental illness.
 - It is really important that we use correct language.
- Importance of safety when presenting information in the media. Items that are potentially triggering should be talked about in advance.
- Each school should be following the same process, for example, to access to psychologists, social workers, and Child and Youth Workers.
- A range of services is provided via the Tiered Intervention model:
 - Tier 1—Universal learning, applicable for all students
 - Social skills, resilience, problem solving, self regulation
 - Tier 2—Children at risk
 - Focus on resilience and self regulation
 - Tier 3—Identified, have a diagnosis
 - Work one on one, refer into the community
- Capacity building work that has been done with teachers:
 - Importance of language
 - What it looks like to build a mentally healthy classroom. Build relationships with children.
 - Teachers have the perspective of seeing many children, and they tend to notice what is developmentally appropriate.
 - Collaborative problem solving:
 - Kids do well if they can, if they aren't, then it is usually a lagging skill.
 - Teacher and child problem solving together—“Next time, what else could you do?”
 - Secondary school—Opportunity to form relationships with guidance counsellors and Student Success teachers.
 - Focussed on specific areas where teachers had concerns (teachers were surveyed):
 - Number one was anxiety
 - ADHD
 - Suicide, part of this was training to be a first responder
 - Focussed a lot this year on self regulation (being able to regulate emotions). A lack of self regulation is a growing problem across the country, particularly in younger children.
- Question—What if these things are not happening in the classroom? How are they are monitored?
- Answer:

- Everybody's job. Change takes time. When there are more teachers that engage in these practices, teachers who aren't using current practices will stand out. Hopefully teachers will speak up.
- Important for parents to speak to teachers, and then principal. Principal's responsibility to supervise staff.
- Keeping doing this work, it will permeate throughout organization.
- Question—Teachers are burning out with Tier 3 interventions. Are we asking too much of our teachers?
- Answer:
 - Some students with complex needs at Tier 3. Teachers at the front line.
 - Teachers and parents can't do it alone. Need community supports. A big issue.
 - Want staff to focus on tier 1 and 2 to try and prevent children moving to tier 3. Need to make sure there are other supports for children who need tier 3 supports.
 - Compassion fatigue is an issue with staff/teachers. Talking to staff about how to recognize this in themselves.
- Professional Development (PD) for professional staff
 - Infant and early childhood development
 - NSSI (Non-suicidal self-injury), e.g. cutting, burning
 - Trauma-informed practice
- Not a lot of presentations have been done for parents or students. Single sessions are not very effective for students.
- Mental Health Promotion—looking to incorporate into curriculum:
 - Zones of regulation
 - Mind Masters
 - Mind Up
 - Sources of Strength (Secondary, currently in 17 schools)
- Specialized populations
 - Initial focus was on Indigenous and LGBT communities
 - Recently spending more time on early learning and newcomers (e.g.refugees)
- Working closely with Youth Services Bureau
 - Waitlists for mental health services have reduced significantly over the last year. Emergency room visits have also decreased.
 - This is due to the Choice and Partnership Approach (CAPA)—intake appointment and then targeted referral
 - OCDSB has an Urgent Care protocol with CHEO for children with suicidal and homicidal behaviours. Child is immediately seen at CHEO. Very effective protocol. Used at least once per week in the OCDSB for the last few years.
- Health Curriculum—Teaches about drugs (including prescription) and alcohol starting in Grade 4.
- Next Steps
